PROGRAMME OF WORK AND PRIORITIES FOR 1962-1963

- (A) Observations on the Programme of Work and Priorities
- The projects contained in the programme of Work and Priorities for 1962-1963 consist, for the most part, of projects approved by the Commission at its third session. As most of these projects are of a continuous nature, they have been included in the 1962-1963 programme of work. However, some of these continuing projects have been re-formulated after the experience gained in 1961. Attention is drawn in particular to project O1-O1 which has been split into five separate projects (01-01 to 01-05).
 - In addition to continuing projects already approved by the Commission, the Executive Secretary is recommending 14 new projects in the various fields of the Commission's activities. The inclusion of these new projects is made possible by the increase in the established posts in the Secretariat of the Commission. The manning table, which contained 70 professional posts in 1961, will contain 95 in 1962. In addition to these established posts, the Executive. Secretary will have the opportunity to appoint specialists to work on ad hoc projects which can be completed within short periods not And at the case carries of the section exceeding one year. al Ara -Listian gai

3. The Executive Secretary, in his report on the work of the Commission since the third session, explains the difficulties which have been encountered in recruiting staff for the Economic Commission for Africa. He would only like here to appeal to the African described governments to co-operate with him in the recruitment of staff from the region so that the heavy load of work can be carried out efficiently within the coming biennium. The Executive Secretary is fully aware of the staffing difficulties encountered by the governments of the region but, unless these governments are prepared to make some sacrifices, the Secretariat of the Commission will not have the adequate number of qualified and experienced Africans who, by virtue The second of th and Digeror out of their being drawn from the region, will help the Secretariat to tackle the economic and social problems in the most possible practical manner.

- 4. The most notable of the new projects are those in the field of economic and industrial research, and the field of training. The research and investigation proposed in projects 02-02, 02-03 and 02-04 are included with a view to finding out whether or not the developing countries are making the necessary efforts to finance development from their own savings and national resources. An eminent economist, and there are many who agree with him, wrote, "The government of an under-developed country needs to spend at least 12 per cent of the national income on recurrent costs, and about 8 per cent of national income on capital costs, making 20 per cent in all". Should the studies reveal that developing countries are not making the necessary efforts, recommendations will be made and methods will be suggested which, if adopted, will help these countries to take the action required to enable their economies to reach the point of "take-off".
- 5. The Division for Industry, Transport and Natural Resources is still a very small one. We have had immense difficulties in recruiting suitable people, and in particular have been disappointed in that the two most senior officers who had been recruited were compelled to decline offers of appointment at the last moment for private family reasons. A Division Director has now been appointed, and both the development of the programme and the build up of the staff are under way. I hope this will enable the Division to tackle effectively in the near future not only its existing programme, but also certain new projects.
- 6. Project 04-01 (Economic Bulletin for Africa) is a continuing project and the Secretariat will continue to produce two issues of the Bulletin each year. In addition, the Executive Secretary is seriously considering the preparation of an Economic Survey of Africa since 1956, to be completed by the end of 1963, and to be submitted to the Commission at its sixth session in 1964. The Executive Secretary hopes that his resources will make this possible.

- 7. This programme of research, through analysis of the African economic problems, should more and more be of help to the African countries in the formulation of their economic policies. The Executive Secretary has reason to believe that the studies already made are beginning to make their impact on the formulation of African policies on national or sub-regional bases. The staff of the Secretariat, in 1961, conducted research and prepared documents for 11 Technical meetings attended by 325 technicians in the various fields of economic and social development. These meetings included the Second Conference of African Statisticians, meetings of Statisticians of certain sub-regions, a conference on Customs Administration, and another on Transport, in West Africa, a Budget Workshop for all the countries of the region, a Workshop on Low-Cost Housing, and various other technical meetings which are enumerated in the Executive Secretary's report on the work of the Commission since the third session. The Secretariat also participated in meetings jointly sponsored with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO) and Food and Agriculture Organization These meetings were attended by 195 policy makers and technicians.
- 8. The Executive Secretary is confident that these meetings, which were held after some serious research work had been done, have been of value to the officials of the government of the region who attended them. Moreover the research done and the meetings held have begun to initiate concerted action in the region. Paragraph 42 of the report of the first session and Resolution 19 (II) of the second session on concerted action in West Africa are beginning to be implemented. The first West African transport conference held in Monrovia in late October 1961, and attended by Minister of Transport and Public Works from 15 West African countries, met with such success that the Executive Secretary hopes that further studies and further seminars and meetings in that region would lead to satisfactory concerted action in this area. Again, the conference on Customs Administration in West Africa may lead to concerted action in another area.

The Commission will, in due course, carry out all the studies approved by the previous sessions and it is hoped that these studies will enable the governments of that region, and subsequently those of other regions, to "initiate and participate in measures for facilitating concerted action for the economic development of Africa, including its social aspect, with a view to raising the level of economic activity and the levels of living in Africa, and for maintaining and strengthening the economic relations of countries and territories of Africans both among themselves and with other countries of the world". 1/ An important area, and perhaps the most important one, in which studies must be made in depth as soon as possible, and in which conferences attended by high-level officials must be held for agreement on concerted action, is the area of industrialization. Many African countries in various sub-regions are embarking on programmes of industrialization. In view of the limited size of most national markets, co-ordination of such programmes would often be required to prevent failures or inefficient use of resources.

emphasis has been laid by the African States in the General Assembly and by the General Assembly itself, is the establishment of an African development institute at which Africans will receive training in development programming. What is new about it is that it is more ambitious than the ones previously contemplated. The Commission has before it detailed proposals for the establishment of this institute. On a recommendation to establish this institute by the Commission and on an application presented by some governments of the region to the Special Fund of the United Nations for assistance, the Executive Secretary will begin to take steps to establish this institute under its auspices.

^{1/} Terms of Reference of the Commission, paragraph 1 (a).

- 10. The regional economic commissions have until recently been regarded as institutions for economic and social research. But during the last year or so the General Assembly and the Economic and Social Council decided that the regional commissions should be associated more and more with the operational aspects of economic and social development. The views of the Secretary-General on the role of the Economic Commission for Africa in regard to operational activities were conveyed to the General Assembly at its fifteenth session by the Under-Secretary of Economic and Social Affairs in the following terms:
 - "... it has always been the Secretary-General's intention to take advantage of the fact that this Commission came late into being and could consequently benefit from the experience of the other commissions in order to define its role from the outset in such a way as to make it as effective as possible, and in particular to ensure that, even in the first few years, this role is not limited to that of a centre for research of a more or less academic character. The importance of the regional factor in economic co-operation and especially with regard to assistance, both technical and financial, is recognized by everyone and in so far as it has been possible to take any action, this has been guided by a concern to give the Secretariat of the Economic Commission for Africa the maximum responsibilities compatible with its existing staff".
- 11. During the sixteenth session of the General Assembly, both the Under-Secretary for Economic and Social Affairs, speaking in the Second Committee, and the Secretary-General, in his report to the General Assembly on decentralization of the United Nations economic and social activities and strengthening of the regional economic commissions, stressed the importance of the role of regional economic commissions. The Under-Secretary informed the Second Committee that in the early days of technical assistance it was erroneously thought that technical assistance was simply a matter of asking for experts by the recipient countries and the provision of those experts by the United Nations. Now it is recognized that the provision of efficient technical assistance is not as simple as that. It requires a careful assessment of the varying needs of the countries and a careful selection of the experts who will meet those needs. In doing so, the regional economic commissions, because they are repositories of knowledge on regional economic and social problems, should be given the responsibility of advising on technical assistance requirements in the economic and social fields.

^{2/} Official Records of the General Assembly, Fifteenth Session, Second Committee, 671st meeting; for extract from remarks see E/3522, Annex II.

- 12. The future pattern, as envisaged by the Secretary-General in his above-mentioned report, is as follows:
 - as possible, in all major areas for which the Commission is responsible: (a) regional advisers should be attached to the secretariat of the Commission, (b) all regional projects should be worked out by the secretariat of the Commission, (c) assistance should be rendered by the staff of the Commission to Governments and resident representatives in the formulation of their country requests, (d) country advisers and regional advisers should be briefed by the secretariat of the Commission and should all be chosen after mutual consultations with Governments, Headquarters and resident representatives".
- 13. The Secretariat of the Economic Commission for Africa has in the past year been very active in advising the governments, in the statistical field, through regional advisers, either provided for in the Secretariat's budget or by the Commissioner of Technical Assistance Operations. Altogether, 10 advisers were attached to the Commission and they were fully active in helping governments in establishing their statistical offices and country programmes and in training. Two regional advisers in the social field have also been attached to the Commission and they visited 6 countries to study and advise on national and sub-regional projects. As the various Divisions of the Secretariat become fully manned, and as they make thorough studies and analyses of the problems of Africa, the same system will be applied in all fields, including industry, transport and natural resources.

- 14. So the role of the Commission, when its Secretariat is fully established, will be to conduct research in African economic and social problems which will throw light on the future trends of development and which will assist the governments of the region individually or collectively to work out their future development policies. The results of research and analyses, as indicated above, will not only be brought to the attention of the governments, but they will form bases for the conferences and seminars to which specialists in the various fields will be invited from all the governments of the region.

 And, finally, the advisory services which will be provided by the staff of the Secretariat and by the regional advisors attached to the Secretariat should be of great assistance to the governments in their development efforts.
- programme of work and priorities in previous years, he should have the necessary flexibility which enables him to make adjustments in the work programme after the Commission has approved it. This is made particularly necessary by the fact that so many African countries have reached independence recently and that the Executive Secretary should have the opportunity to come to their sid, either for investigating their immediate problems or for giving them technical advice. In these efforts, the Executive Secretary is pleased to report that the Department of Economic and Social Affairs has been, and will be, of continuous assistance to him.
- 16. Unexpected calls on the services of the Secretariat of the Economic Commission for Africa may, in addition, force the Executive Secretary to postpone action on some of the ad hoc projects which, as a rule, he should carry but in the first year of the biennium.
