5. General debate on:

(a) Review and appraisal of the economic situation in Africa during the period 1985-1986 and perspectives for 1987 [agenda sub-item 5(a)]

(i) Survey of economic and social conditions in Africa 1985-1986 (agenda sub-item 5(a)(i)).

The Survey of Economic and Social Conditions in Africa provides an analysis of the economic trends and situation in the two years preceding the meeting of the Conference of Ministers as well as projections for the current year. The survey therefore analyses the main features of the conditions prevalent in the years 1985 and 1986, at the regional level, taking account as much as possible and when relevant, of conditions existing at the country and subregional levels. Since all information is not yet in for the year 1986, figures given for that year are still provisional estimates while those of 1985 are more definitive. For the year 1987, projections are provided for the main economic aggregates at the regional and subregional levels.

The Survey shows that the slight recovery of African economies realized in 1985 was not sustained in 1986. Total regional output grew by 1.2 per cent as against 3 per cent in 1985. The lower rate of growth in 1986 was largely attributable to a particularly unfavourable international economic environment for developing Africa. Agriculture had another favourable year with value added in the sector rising by 2.2 per cent. Prospects for 1987 will depend to a great extent on efforts made by member States to steer their economies back to a more sustainable growth path. On the external front, the demand for, and the prices of oil and other primary commodities of export interest to Africa as well as donor's position with regard to debt rescheduling and the provision of additional resources will be equally crucial (doc. E/ECA/CM.13/3 and E/ECA/CM.13/3(Summary)).

(ii) ECA/ADB Economic Report on Africa, 1987 [agenda sub-item 5(a)(ii)]

The ECA/ADB Economic Report is an annual publication started in 1984 in which the ECA secretariat and the African Development Bank jointly review current trends in African economies and critically examine specific and topical issues in the African development scene. This year's report focuses on the mobilization of resources within the framework of the United Nations Programme of Action for African Economic Recovery and Development, 1986-1990 and Africa's Priority Programme for Economic Recovery, 1986-1990. (doc. E/ECA/CM.13/4 and E/ECA/CM.13/4/Summary).

(b) Progress in the implementation of the United Nations Programme of Action for African Economic Recovery and Development 1986-1990 and Africa's Priority Programme for Economic Recovery 1986-1990 [agenda sub-item 5(b)]

The review and appraisal of the implementation of (United Nations Programme of Action for African Economic Recovery and Development) and (Africa's Priority Programme for Economic Recovery) presented under this agenda item is based on a questionnaire which was designed by the secretariat and sent to member States. The review shows that the majority of countries in the region have initiated the reform measures proposed in the two programmes and have also begun to put in place the necessary mechanisms for implementing the programmes (doc. E/ECA/CM.13/5 and E/ECA/CM.13/5/Summary).

(c) The situation of food and agriculture in Africa [agenda sub-item 5(c)]

(i) Report on the implementation of the food and agriculture aspects of the Lagos Plan of Action [agenda sub-item 5(c)(i)]

Under this agenda item the implementation of the food and agriculture aspects of the Lagos Plan of Action (LPA) is discussed. Despite encouraging efforts made by some African countries to implement the LPA in the food and agriculture sector over the period 1980-1995, available evidence suggests that the Plan remained largely unimplemented. Even in those countries which strove to implement the Plan, there seems to be no concrete indication confirming that this emanated from a conscious effort designed to achieve the Plan's targets. While the countries had an apparent desire to execute the Plan, this was not translated into realities owing to a number of constraints. These included poor infrastructure; scarcity of skilled manpower; absence of suitable policies; inappropriate agricultural practices; growing emphasis on narrow, national interests; rising demographic pressure; inexistence of clearly defined LPA-related targets; inhospitable, external economic setting; unfavourable aid environment; and preoccupation with emergencies. It is, therefore, recommended that the countries review critically their past activities, identify areas of weaknesses and map out a new strategy to attain the Plan's objectives with a focus on the key sub-sectors stressed in the African Priority Programme for Economic Recovery, 1986-1990 (doc. E/ECA/CM.13/6 and E/ECA/CM.13/6/Summary).

(ii) Report on policy measures and institutions for improved forest conservation, management and development in Africa [agenda sub-item 5(c)(ii)]

The main findings of the paper are: (i) Fuelwood consumption and shifting cultivation are the main causes of the Miombo forests disappearance in the subregion. For example, curing tobacco in the Tabora Region, Tanzania requires 2.2 million m<sup>3</sup> of Miombo's wood resources, and similar amounts are required in the other countries. It is thus recommended that a "tree planting fund and forest management plan", financed basically by the consumers of fuelwood for tobacco curing, should be established in these zones; (ii) Miombo forest inventories are also required in the endangered zones; e.g. in Tabora and Luapula provinces of Tanzania and Zambia respectively; (iii) the need to carry out a general plan to change the present shifting cultivation systems into a permanent agriculture, by promoting rural extension and permanent trials are among other activities needed; (iv) with regard to forest fires, and owing to their damage they cause in this zone, it is suggested that ECA should declare 1988, the year of combating forest fires in Africa; (v) on manpower, the paper suggests the preparation of a subregional survey on forest staff and manpower requirements, especially those concerned with the conservation and development of the Miobo genetic resources; (vi) the paper, apart from suggesting that the study be extended to the rest of the countries of the subregion, underlines the need to update the forestry policies of the subregion, in particular it stresses the need to increase the level of investment in this ecosystem by about 15 to 20 per cent annually; (vii) the paper concludes by recommending the incorporation of the findings of the study into the FAO's Tropical Forestry Action Plan, in an effort to collaborate with FAO in carrying out specific programmes to preserve and invigorate this ecosystem at the subregional level (doc. E/ECA/CM.13/7 and E/ECA/CM.13/7/Summary).

- (iii) Report on survey of agricultural research and programme for livestock development in the African region [agenda sub-item 5(c)(iii)]

Although livestock plays an important role in the economies of most African countries, past development efforts have not been commensurate with the magnitude of the problem and its potential. In the past, Africa has been increasingly dependent on imports, which grew at an annual rate of 16 per cent between 1975 and 1984. Policy inadequacies are at the heart of this problem. Government interventions tended to hamper the self-reliant, and independent capability of "traditional" producers and merchants.

Since animals and their owners cross national boundaries and diseases do not honour political boundaries, effective multinational co-operation and co-ordination is necessary. If measures are not adopted to improve productivity, trade deficits are expected to grow to $US5 billion and 23 billion by 1990 and 2000 respectively. Recommendations are made with respect to needed improvement in government policies and planning (doc. E/ECA/CM.13/8 and E/ECA/CM.13/8/Summary).

- (iv) Report on the implementation of the recommendations of the World Conference of Agrarian Reform and Rural Development in the Lusaka-based MULPOC subregion [agenda sub-item 5(c)(iv)]

The report discusses the main objectives of the World Conference on Agrarian Reform and Rural Development (WCARRD) which are the eradication of rural poverty as well as nutritional, education and health improvement. In spite of various problems, progress have been registered in areas such as access to land and other natural resources. However, in-depth analysis shows the existence of gross inequalities especially in the distribution of resources such as land and water, and in education and health facilities between urban and rural areas. The report recommends that governments should once again rededicate themselves to the ideals and principles of WCARRD as well as the Lagos Plan of Action (doc. E/ECA/CM.13/9 and E/ECA/CM.13/9/Summary).

- (v) International Year for the mobilization of financial and technological resources to increase food and agriculture in Africa [agenda sub-item 5(c)(v)]

The proposals in this document regarding an international year devoted to the mobilization of financial and technological resources for food and agriculture in Africa underscore the importance of agricultural research and training in the development of appropriate technology for food and agriculture and call for a substantial increase in investments in research on a sustained basis. Within the context of APPER, the future financial requirements of African agricultural research systems from both domestic and external sources are estimated at $1.2 to $2.3 billion annually. The readiness and ability to mobilize this quantum of resources is part of the commitment which African countries and the international community have made in APPER and UN PAAERD (doc. E/ECA/CM.13/10 and E/ECA/CM.13/10/Summary).

- (vi) Report on measures taken by the African countries to reduce food losses over the period 1975-1985 [agenda sub-item 5(c)(vi)]

During the period 1975 to 1985 many African countries and international organizations implemented programmes aimed at reducing post harvest food losses in response to the resolution by the United Nations General Assembly calling for a reduction of these losses by 50 per cent by the year 1985. However, it is uncertain whether the target of a 50 per cent reduction has been achieved. What is shown is that a great deal of information has been gathered on the nature, magnitude and causes of post harvest food losses. New post harvest technologies and the wealth of information now available to continue the fight to increase food supplies and availability through the reduction or even prevention of the occurrence of post harvest food losses (doc. E/ECA/CM.13/11 and E/ECA/CM13/11/Summary).

- (vii) Report on a comparative study and analysis of ongoing food security programmes [agenda sub-item 5(c)(vii)]

The concept of world food security with its objective of ensuring that all people at all time have both physical and economic access to the basic food they need has been accorded high priority by African countries and donors alike. However, certain issues call for consideration if true food security is to be achieved in the continent: African countries need to give more consideration to the problem of access to food supplies for low income rural and urban groups in their food security programmes; efforts to improve food security should concentrate not only on cereals and grains but also on the non-cereal basic food stuffs such as roots and tubers, oilseeds, pulses and plantains. And although national preparedness has improved, very few countries are ready to cope with future shortages. African countries and international donor agencies are therefore urged to take these issues into account when evaluating past efforts in search of food security and in formulating and implementing future food and preparedness plans (doc. E/ECA/CM.13/12 and E/ECA/CM.13/12/Summary).

(viii) Land use policies and farming systems: The case of Somalia and Sudan [agenda sub-item 5(c)(viii)]

It is becoming increasingly recognized that for sustainable and long-term agricultural productivity in Africa, rational utilization of the basic agricultural resource base (land, water, etc.) holds the key to Africa's future development. In this context, the paper raises a number of issues relating to the rational utilization of land resources base including its sound planning, management and conservation. Governments are therefore urged to adopt sound land-soil resources use policies (doc. E/ECA/CM.13/13 and E/ECA/CM.13/13/Summary).

6. Report, recommendations and resolutions submitted by the eighth meeting of the Technical Preparatory Committee of the Whole for consideration by the twenty-second session of the Commission/thirteenth meeting of the Conference of Ministers, on:

Under this agenda sub-item, the Conference will have before it a report which deals with the utilization of international river and lake basin organizations as focal points for promoting subregional integrated socio-economic development in Africa within the framework of the UNDP Fourth Cycle Regional Programming (doc. ECA/CM.13/14 and E/ECA/CM.13/14/Summary).

(ii) Review of the situation with regard to the development of water resources in the drought-stricken countries of the African region [agenda sub-item 6(a)(ii)]

The report reviews the situation with regard to the development of water resources in the drought-stricken countries of the African region. It also discusses short- and medium-term frameworks for action at the national and international levels (doc. E/ECA/CM.13/15 and E/ECA/CM.13/15/Summary).

(iv) Report of the sixth United Nations Regional Cartographic Conference for Africa [agenda sub-item 6(a)(iv)]

The Conference will have before it the report of the sixth United Nations Regional Cartographic Conference for Africa held in Addis Ababa in November 1986. The report stresses the urgent need for resolute actions toward strengthening existing cartographic infrastructure and establishing them where they do not exist as well as orienting and integrating cartographic projects into national development strategies including actively playing their roles in monitoring the resurgence of natural factors that sparked off the current economic crisis in Africa (doc. E/ECA/CM.13/17 and E/ECA/CM.13/17/Summary).

(v) Report on the impact of the commemoration of 1986 as the year of cartography and remote sensing in Africa [agenda sub-item 6(a)(v)]

The report outlines the activities undertaken at regional and national levels for the commemoration of 1986 as the "Year of Cartography in Africa". It also highlights some of the difficulties which called for the extension of the year to April 1987 (doc. E/ECA/CM.13/18 and E/ECA/CM.13/18/Summary).

(vi) Report of the regional consultative meeting on the mobilization of financial resources for the development of new and renewable sources of energy in Africa [agenda sub-item 6(a)(vi)]

The report shows that the consumption of fuelwood in Africa has increased in rural as well as urban areas and that the consumption of charcoal was increasing even faster. This has had detrimental effects on fuelwood supply and attendant environmental consequences. The development and utilization of new and renewable sources of energy in Africa may offer a partial solution to the energy problem in the majority of African countries. The report recommends, inter alia, that African countries should seek ways and means for the effective utilization of other alternative sources of energy such as solar energy and biogas (doc. E/ECA/CM.13/19 and E/ECA/CM.13/19/Summary).

(b) Industrial development in Africa (agenda item 8)

(iii) Problems and constraints for the implementation of the Industrial Development Decade for Africa [agenda sub-item 6(b)(iii)]

The document to be presented under this item shows that little progress has been made in the implementation of the Industrial Development Decade for Africa. Three main factors are responsible, viz: (i) The lack of concrete commitment on the part of African countries to the IDDA Programme especially its multinational and subregional components; (ii) the lack of external financial and technical support from the donor community especially the developed countries; and (iii) the difficulties facing the ECA secretariat in providing the necessary support to member States because of lack of adequate resources (doc. E/ECA/CM.13/21 and E/ECA/CM.13/21/Summary).

(iv) Report on preparation for United Nations Industrial Development Organization (UNIDO) II [agenda sub-item 6(b)(iv)]

The document presented under this item provides a brief on activities underway in Africa which will culminate in the holding of an extraordinary session in September, 1987 of the Conference of African Ministers of Industry preparatory to the second General Conference of UNIDO scheduled to take place in November 1987 (doc.
